George S. Titchell, Jr.'s History—His First Appearance in Business—Calls Upon Him in Prison.

From the Philadelphia North American.

There was a story, unconfirmed, that Mr. Titchell had motored to Washington and, having purchased a few shares in the United States Steel Corporation, he returned to Philadelphia for a rest and was seized by officers of the corporation and brought before the judge of the United States Court of Appeals, at Washington, and was committed to the United States Penitentiary, at Leavenworth, under a charge of perjury.

It was said that Mr. Titchell had written a statement as to his knowledge of the murder of the mother, the epilogue to the drama of blood and debt and innocence, will be the theme of the next chapter in the Titchell story. Mrs. Hitt is in her grave; Young Titchell is a man of affairs, and a man of no mean sort to his friends. He is not yet a plodding, everyday lawyer, but an ambitious, young man, with a mind that is active and alert; he is not yet a plodding, everyday lawyer, but an ambitious, young man, with a mind that is active and alert;
